Project Summary

Project Summary:

Include a brief description of how this project will address the 2016 JAG goal. Also include target population, estimated number to be served annually and cost per person (if applicable). See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 1,000 characters)

This project will continue to address the JAG goals by offering our RJ program's Community Group Conferences to appropriate referred youth from Juvenile Diversion, District Courts, and the DA's office. Restorative Justice programs increase accountability, reduce recidivism and further system penetration while repairing relationship which are crucial in small rural communities. This 2016-2017 grant will aim to serve at least 20 youth, ages 10-17, and 20 adults. The hope is that we will well exceed these numbers however. The approximate cost of this program is calculated to be $732/ participant.

Purpose Area: Prevention and Education

Problem Statement:

Describe the problem the proposed project intends to address. Local and/or state data should be used to describe the nature of the problem. See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 5,000 characters)

Gunnison County does not, on average, see large numbers of youth charged with violent crimes or serious felony offenses. What we have seen is that those youth that do have charges filed have substantial family, economic, academic, substance use and emotional issues that require intervention from all agencies involved or are at risk of becoming involved. Juvenile arrest rates have remained somewhat static over the years and it is probable that this is due in part to Gunnison County's commitment to embrace and support youth prevention and intervention programming in a collaborative way. Within the Juvenile Services Department is housed the County's Juvenile Diversion and SB94 programs, 1451 Collaborative, Family Advocate Support Team (FAST),and Gunnison County's Substance Abuse Prevention Project(GCSAPP). The sub-departments work together to address community risk factors and build protective factors to support youth and families. Although the juvenile crime rate may be static, there is an apparent increase in other risk factors. Gunnison County is a frontier county offering world class recreation opportunities to visitors and residents alike. In part, due to tourism and the frontier nature of this county, many of the residents in the county experience higher than average substance use rates with a declining perception of risk, poverty, and high child maltreatment rates. According to ASPIRE Standard Indicators Database – Omni Research and Training, Gunnison County is ranked 2nd among all frontier counties for Juvenile Delinquency Drug Filing Rate; ranked 3rd for Juvenile Drug-Related Arrests Rate; and ranked 4th for Juvenile Alcohol-Related Arrests Rate. County Health Rankings and Roadmaps (CHRR), 2008-2010,places Gunnison County as 15th highest in Colorado for rates of violent crime. Local data shows that between 2010 and 2012 students perceived favorable parent attitudes of substance use. Between 2011 and 2012, youth perceived less risk in using marijuana by 5%. Gunnison High School students report less perceived risk to using marijuana regularly and occasionally by more than 4% over Colorado's average. Students mirror a higher than state average adult binge drinking rate (adults rates Gunnison/State 26%/16%) as students report a slightly higher binge drinking rate of 24% from high school students versus 22% as a state average – even while local rates have declined from 31% since 2009. Local economies have been impacted, as they have across the country, and local families have not seen a full recovery as of yet. 42% of students at Gunnison Community Schools qualify for Free and Reduced Lunch, a more than 7% increase from 2012 - 2013. 17.9% of people live in poverty compared to 13.4% as the state average. Also of note is Gunnison County's child maltreatment rate of 12.1% which is significantly above the state average of 8.6%. It is critical to intervene, and use prevention methods, with our population of juveniles, their families, and community with a restorative justice approach—specifically, Community Group Conferencing. This service has been available in the past, however, the local non-profit that provided this service has since closed this program down due to funding and other priority focuses for that organization. "CGC's have retributive, rehabilitative, and preventative qualities," according to the Evidence- Based Juvenile Offender Programs report compiled by the Washington State Institute for Public Policy. This program would directly impact the identified risk factors within our community. The OMNI Statewide Evaluation of DCJ Juvenile Diversion programs for youth in the Juvenile Diversion program notes that there is a statistical trend observed for restorative justice services on increased locus of control. Locus of control increases have been significantly correlated with reduced recidivism. All appropriate youth enrolled in the Gunnison County Juvenile Diversion program will attend a restorative justice conference to allow a process for apologizing to victims and making a plan for repairing harm.

Collaboration/Sustainability

Collaboration:

Elaborate on partners and relationships specifically with other agencies and organizations impacted by the proposed project. See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 3,000 characters)

Gunnison County's Juvenile Services has many examples of collaboration, beginning with the SB 94 Community Evaluation Team in 1999, and the subsequent Health and Human Services Commission and HB 1451 Collaborative Management Project (FAST). GCSAPP began in 2006 and represents a large community coalition whose mission is directed at reducing substance use among youth in Gunnison County. The Health and Human Services Commission serves to assess community needs, coordinate services,develop new programs, and share agency information with the intent to provide the most effective and efficient service delivery system possible. Over 40 area agencies, community members and elected officials participate. The Collaborative Management Project (FAST), now in its sixth year was introduced to provide a multi-agency, family-centered case conferencing and service delivery process. Fourteen partnering agencies have entered into a Memorandum Of Understanding articulating our commitment to work together with a common purpose to assist families in our community. Contracts for services between partnering agencies are also used. Contracts address the overall community goals of reducing juvenile recidivism, child placements,substance use and improving overall outcomes for families. Collaboration reduces duplication and eliminates fragmentation of services. This increases quality, effectiveness of services provided, cost-sharing among service providers, and overall better outcomes and cost reduction for services provided to children and families in our community. The Health and Human Services Commission meets on a quarterly basis focusing on agency communication and community needs identification. Needs assessments are conducted on a yearly basis with the identified needs built into a master strategic plan. The primary focus of these strategic plans has always been heavily focused on juvenile justice planning and addressing the growing needs confirmed through community needs assessments. The HB 1451/ Family Advocacy Support Team(FAST) meets three times per month focused on program planning, information sharing and case consultation. GCSAPP's community coalition meets every other month while engaging an Executive Committee once a month at minimum to oversee county prevention efforts.

Future Funding of Project:

Elaborate on what steps will be taken to sustain this project after these federal funds are no longer available. (maximum length = 2,000 characters)

Gunnison County Juvenile Services is committed to providing a Restorative Practices Program in support of our community. As multiple funding sources support Juvenile Services efforts, over time, staff and financial resources can be allocated to continue the Restorative Justice Program as JAG funds are no longer available. In addition, we will be applying for state grants as appropriate to help sustain this project.

Continuation Applicants

Project Accomplishments:

Provide a brief synopsis of what this project accomplished with its previous grant award. (maximum length = 2,000 characters)

In 2014-1015, a power point had been created for training purposes, brochures were made for marketing, forms and contracts had been updated. We served 11 youth, from direct referrals and served 34 adults by conducting more than three community member trainings and informational meetings for interested parties and agencies. In 2015-2016 thus far, we have served 5 referred youth, with 16 more youth who have recently been referred through diversion, and who will be completing a Restorative Justice conference on 2/27/16. The local police department had been given a training and are in support our program. Approx. 90% of conferences have had a local law enforcement representation present. Feedback from victims, offenders, and all others involved in the CGC's show that this process had been beneficial. Victims have felt relief. Parents, support people, community members, and attending police officers stated that they were very honored to be a part of "such and important process". Offenders became very invested in "repairing the harms", taking responsibility for their actions, writing apology notes, and finishing their RJ contracts in a timely manner. Most shared that this process overall has helped them learn how to make more mindful decisions in the future, and that in going through RJ they realized how much their parents and community cared about their health and well being. Strong interest and networking has reestablished our Restorative Justice as a worthwhile program in Gunnison and Hinsdale Counties. This includes having held community-wide trainings to educate and train community members and appropriate agencies in the Restorative Justice process. With all of this initial effort and outreach, these sources have then been able to refer appropriate youth and their families to the Restorative Justice Program as an alternative to entering into the court system and/or receiving school-based discipline or consequences.

Project Changes:

Describe any significant project changes (programmatic or budgetary) from the previously funded project. See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 5,000 characters)

The primary change to the continuation of this project is related to scaling back the goals and objectives as now the Restorative Justice Coordinator's position is 14 hours per week. We will be providing Community Group Conferencing primarily to all appropriate referred youth and their families. The initial second goal of providing preventative family group conferencing has been taken out at this time again due to staff time being reduced. In addition, the goal of having three community trainings, targeting 30 community members, has been scaled back to two trainings serving 20 adults. The other change is related to the budget. The only expenses now at this point will be related to personnel and travel.

Evaluation of Past Progress:

Summarize the extent to which each of the project's goals and/or objectives were met, with supporting data included. See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 5,000 characters)

Offering Restorative Justice for all appropriate youth referred through Juvenile Diversion has occurred 100% of the time. In order to offer this, the coordinator received facilitator training through the Longmont Communty Justice Partnership. A power point was then created to provide RJ presentations and trainings Gunnison Middle School and Crested Butte Community School school counselors and principals, the local Union Congregational Church's 8 board members, Gunnison County Police Department, Gunnison Rotary Club, local judges and attorneys, and two other separate community member trainings to those who are interested in volunteering as such for any held Community Group Conferences. All youth who have been given RJ as an option under Gunnison County Juvenile Diversion program completed community group conferences and follow up contracts. All show excitement about using a Restorative Justice as deemed necessary. An effective measurement survey has also been created to be given pre/post training. RJ has served 34 adults and 16 youth thus far. Overall, in the first year and a half of this program implementation, there have been a great deal of successes and progress made in creating a worth-while, effective, and sustainable Restorative Justice Program.

Project Plan

Project Plan:

Describe the proposed strategy(ies) for addressing the problem stated in the Problem Statement section. Clearly link the strategy to the specified problem described. See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 6,500 characters)

The main strategy we will continue to implement is to continue to expand the Restorative Justice Program within Gunnison County's Juvenile Services Department. We will continue providing facilitation of the Community Group Conferencing process for referred cases from Juvenile Diversion, District Courts, and GCSAPP. It will continue to expand training and outreach to increase our community's knowledge base on the use and practices of restorative justice to grow and sustain the program overtime while increasing protective factors throughout Gunnison County. Having the ability to conduct timely CGC's provides an increase in accountability from offenders and is supported through well documented research to reduce recidivism and limit a youth's penetration into the criminal system. The objective continues to be the ability to improve overall outcomes in the areas of youth behavior and functioning, family support and resources and maintenance in our community setting. Juvenile Services' strategic planning process is focused on expanding our continuum of services available to meet the unique needs of youth and families involved in the criminal justice system, or at imminent risk of deeper involvement in the system through integrated and coordinated case management. Our continuum of services are uniquely matched to youth and families who demonstrate complex needs and are best met within the context of the juvenile justice system. The restorative justice model enhances communication and coordination with all agencies involved with the youth and/or family such as juvenile justice, child welfare, mental health, and special education, enhancing overall treatment effectiveness. Because one of our priorities is to prevent youth from moving deeper into the criminal justice system and to enable them to become successful members of their community, we have a vested interest in providing a team-based planning process intended to provide individualized, coordinated, family-driven care to the most difficult-to-serve clients. This is achieved with effective facilitation of a Community Group Conference, including Victim Offender Mediation. At the same time, because we value keeping youth out of the criminal justice system, whenever clinically and legally appropriate, we are enhancing our efforts and ability to refer youth to community-based services such as CGC's. Gunnison County Juvenile Services would like to reach this goal through the program development of Restorative Justice. This project has four main objectives: To provide services as early as possible so youth can be successful at home, in school, and their communities; Make services available based on individual strengths and needs of the youth and family; Maximize resources available to serve youth across systems; and monitor outcomes and provide accountability through local data collection. Erin Ryan, the Restorative Justice Coordinator has had comprehensive training, support and skill development to assist the youth and family members to repair harms done to relationships, develop problem-solving skills, coping skills, self-efficacy and ability to integrate the youth into the community. Supervision, coaching and performance monitoring has also been provided to her. During the conferencing process a team of people who are relevant in the life of the youth (e.g. family members, members of the family's social support network, service providers and agency representatives) will collaboratively develop a conference plan, implement this plan, monitor the efficacy of the plan and work towards outcomes. The conference plan does include formal services and interventions together with community services and interpersonal support and assistance. The success of implementing restorative justice will also be based on the continued use of the successful collaboration and coordination among local child and family serving agencies and organizations in our community. Implementing Restorative Justice Conferences with at-risk youth and those involved in the juvenile justice system strongly supports the goals of the JAG

Program. This project uses a collaborative approach to prevent and reduce crime and delinquency, repairs harms, as well as bridging the gaps between child and family serving agencies to improve outcomes and the efficient use of resources. Studies support the hypothesis that youth who received restorative justice conference services are less likely to engage in subsequent at-risk and delinquent behavior. Gunnison County's Department of Juvenile Services includes several program areas that would be additional resources to the Restorative Justice program including Juvenile Diversion, SB 94, HB 1451 /Collaborative Management Project locally known as Family Advocacy Support Team (FAST) and the Gunnison County Substance Abuse Prevention Project. Specific resources include, but are not limited to, case consultation, assessment, in-home behavioral health services, financial assistance, independent living skills, parent education, mentoring, educational support, crisis intervention, prevention education and alternative activities for youth.Responsible parties for the implementation of the project will include:Janet Reinman, Juvenile Services Director (Juvenile Diversion and SB 94 Case Manager) and Erin Ryan, Restorative Justice Program Coordinator.

Goals & Objectives

These are the elements against which the project will be evaluated and which will be used to report quarterly and final progress. See instructions for further information.

Goal 1: To increase youth accountability and to repair harm to victims of crime and the community caused by juvenile offenders through Restorative Justice Programming

	Objective	Outcome	Measurement	Timeframe
1.1	Provide Restorative Justice as a Juvenile Diversion option	90% of offenders will successfully complete conference outcomes requirements, 90% of victims and community members will be satisfied with the restorative justice process,less than 10% of youth will re-offend during program participation	Number of youth to complete contracts Victim and Community Member Satisfaction Survey	10/01/2016-09/30/2017
1.2	Collaborate with law enforcement for youth referrals	90% of Restorative Justice conferences will include Law enforcement participation	Number conferences attended by law enforcement officers.	10/01/2016-09/30/2017
1.3

Goal 2 (If needed): Increase knowledge and use of Restorative Justice throughout Gunnison County

	Objective	Outcome	Measurement	Timeframe
2.1	Provide two educational presentations throughout project year to 20 community professionals and educators.	20 professionals attending training	Pre/post survey use to measure RJ knowledge before and after trainings	10/01/2016-09/30/2017
2.2
2.3

Goal 3 (If needed):

	Objective	Outcome	Measurement	Timeframe
3.1
3.2
3.3

Project Evaluation:

Describe the approach for evaluating the project in response to the stated objectives, outcomes and measurements. See instructions for further information. (maximum length = 5,000 characters)

Collecting, confirming and reporting on required performance measures within the time frame provided in the areas of personnel, contractual services and equipment supplies will follow protocol already in place. All of the project's services, staff and supervision will be central to one office and no more than the two identified key staff. Universal performance measures in addition to direct service measurements are currently being collected, confirmed and reported on a quarterly basis on all other programs within the department of Juvenile Services. The Juvenile Services Director, Janet Reinman, is identified as the grant/project manager and currently has an established procedure for collecting and reporting data for Gunnison County's Juvenile Services Department.Project success will be determined by the number of youth and families served in the target population, completing and reporting satisfaction with the process, without further incident. Completion is specified by the successful completion of conferencing and subsequent conference plans. Satisfaction will be identified through Post Conference Surveys. Success will also be determined by the rates of recidivism for youth involved in the restorative justice program. These will be measured through quarterly outcome tracking and pre/post surveys. The survey is given at the entry into a Juvenile Services Program and again when they complete or exit a program. Data will be reported on quarterly and year end reports through the JAG data entry system and evaluated on an on-going basis for success.
